I graduated in 1999 from the University of Amsterdam, dental faculty (ACTA). From the start, I had special interest in crown and bridgework, as well as aesthetic dentistry. Also, I wanted better to understand why in some sets of teeth there was constantly something going wrong. For example, why things broke off, why some people often have pains and need to be in a dentist's chair every 3 months or why people who are unhappy about the aesthetics of their teeth, but their dentist invariably says no.

To gain more insight into these things, I worked at the "Kroon- en Brugwerk" clinic between 2002-2005, at the department of oral functional theory at the dental faculty of Amsterdam and later in different referral practices specialised in that area.

As of 2003 I did intensive orthodontics courses and focused especially on orthodontic treatment of adults. My strength turned out to be the combination of functional theory, crown and bridgework and orthodontics.

By combining these disciplines it became possible to create a maximal aesthetic and functional result with minimal intervention (minimal invasive dentistry).

In 2005 I was invited to take part in the 'International Interdisciplinary Study Group', in which I have participated since that time with much pleasure. Through this group I came into contact with many prominent colleagues from Europe and the United States and I was given the opportunity to further perfect my insights, techniques and concepts.

By participating in the study group and visiting international congresses and courses I always try to utilise the latest insights and techniques.
