During my education as a dental technician it fascinated me how we could repair the shape and function of teeth so faithfully. My choice of specialisation was therefore easily made - crown and bridgework.

After I graduated, I worked with pleasure in a dental laboratory for several years and made many crowns and bridgeworks there.

During my work there I realised more and more that a crown has to meet a great many demands. A crown has to fit perfectly and look like a natural tooth. But there was one aspect I thought was neglected: the patient has to be able to clean the crown properly.

This started my interest in dental hygiene, dental cleaning and preservation of natural teeth.

Combining this with my wish to work more with patients, I made the decision in 2002 to start the education Oral Hygiene at the Hogeschool Nijmegen (HAN). After graduating I was given the opportunity to gain experience in several leading referral practices in the area of periodontology.

With my experience, I obtained a growing conviction that good dentistry, thorough dental cleaning and dental hygiene are indispensable to each other.

I always look for techniques to perfect dental cleaning and to offer solutions to my patients with which they can easily maintain their oral hygiene themselves at home.
